2005: Year of the Phoenix

Friday, December 31, 2004

Hey CyberPals!

Can you feel it, boys and girls? It's change.

Things are moving in the right direction for me, just left my job to fly solo again as a freelancer, and I've been busy revamping everything!

Why, I bet with this brand spankin new newsletter system I've just designed, you probably think I've handwritten this newsletter just for you!

Uhm... which I did, of course.

The magic word this year will be "PHOENIX". You'll probably be hearing that word a lot, between the X-Men and Harry Potter and stuff. It is also the pet name for my private little project. A proprietary PHP CMS system I have been slowly building and designing over the past year.

Little bits and pieces have been appearing on several websites I've designed, it's practically running my entire site, and eventually, I'm offering the modules as downloads for WHUZZUPDATE members.

Things like this newsletter module with a great majordomo-like registration system, E-Cards (like the new version I'm ready to unload now that I'm done beta testing the crap out of it), product lines, counter/stats, real estate... whole buncha stuff.... more details next month.

SoApBoX: Rantz & Raves"Desire... and giving thanks" (November 27th, 2004)- I've hit a turning point in my life... and I've come to realize I am one of the luckiest guys on earth.
